Manager comment

The first review of the Greek new adjustment program was concluded in June, allowing the ESM to disburse 7.5 bn. euros of bailout aid, while another 2.8 bn. of euros will be available when Greece meets further milestones. As a result, ECB reinstated the waiver for Greek bonds, in order to be used again as collateral in Eurosystem monetary policy operations. At a later stage, ECB will examine possible purchases of GGBs under its QE program. The banking sector remained under pressure, affected by poor sentiment in EU periphery banks and local concerns, related to challenging economic conditions.

Under the bailout program, the target for privatization proceeds is set at 6.4 bn. euros by end 2018, while HELIXON project is on process. The successful implementation of the program, debt relief measures and the participation of GGBs in QE program, which would lead to a re-pricing of the country risk, could be positive catalysts for the Greek economy and the equity market.

The Greek equity market remained volatile and correlated with global equity market trends. The historic decision of Britain to leave the EU, if implemented, would prove a very long process resulting in an extended period of heightened uncertainty.

During Q2 2016, the Greek stock market closed at 542.12 points, while recording 6.06% loss. During second quarter of 2016, Alpha Trust Andromeda's portfolio posted a loss of -1.04%. The relative outperformance versus the market was the result of the comparatively better performance of its core holdings, stocks and Greek government bonds.
