Manager comment

The Athens Stock Exchange stabilized in the third quarter of 2019 as it closed at 868.42 points. The July 7th elections result sparked expectations for the ASE, which closed to 900 points. However, the international turmoil that followed the trade war between China and the US and the increase in geopolitical risk (BREXIT, Iran etc) led the Index to 792 points. The impressive improvement in Greek bonds with its 10-year yield falling to historic lows, the complete abolition of capital controls as well as the expectations of approval for the Non-performing loans Asset Protection Scheme are supportive factors for the market.

At the macroeconomic level, the economy continued its upward trajectory as GDP increased by 1.9% yoy in the second quarter of 2019. Second quarter/first half of the year corporate results demonstrated that the companies that have managed to survive during the crisis, have now stabilized and increased their performance. Prospects are better while the Greek economy recovers and the international environment remains supportive.

Given a supportive international environment, positive catalysts for the Greek stock market, would be the acceleration of privatizations, new investments that will support the return of the economy to a sustainable growth path and the credit rating upgrade.

The portfolio's Net Asset Value increased by 1.02% during the third quarter of 2019.
